THE TEXT

① Sarah Jetti is a 19-year-old electrician. Daughter of a driver, she and her family suffered financial problems and her father's salary was not enough. That's when she realized she had to get a job, and so she decided to enrol in a course for apprentice electricians.

③ At the end of that course, Sarah started working for an electricity company. When a journalist asked her about this man-dominated field, she replied: "At my workplace, I am the only female electrician. Yet, I never felt anybody treating me differently." Now, for her future career, Sarah is dreaming of becoming a chief engineer. "You should never let society decide for you," she concluded. "Believe in yourself and success will follow!"
